LOOP...sculptural shape in a one-piece shell

Designer Burkhard Vogtherr, creator of the Motion, Webb, Lucid, and Body chairs, has now designed a true artistic form that “loops” around to create a one-piece polypropylene shell. The sculptural shape offers many unique visual angles from the flowing shell to the architectural frame. Chairs may be specified in all plastic or with upholstered seat pads.

The addition of two tables broadens the use of this collection from an elegant side chair to light lounge, conference, to even dining or café when used with one of the many dining tables offered by Davis.

LOOP...the color story

Eight distinctive colors have been selected for the Loop Chair Series. Black and white for the purist with six additional colors.

The color pallet was selected to blend with the current colorways used in environments such as guest seating, dining, conference, and lounge.

The polpropylene shell and powdercoate base are both 100% recyclable.

LOOP...tables for lounging or just a side

Two tables were developed just for the Loop Series. First a tall side table was designed to be used as an occasional table between two chairs for a light bistro setting or breakout area. The second table is a low lounging table that is just large enough for informal gatherings with four Loop chairs. Both tables are available in five veneers, stocked laminates, solid surface plastic, and granite.

Additional dining tables, such as the Kirkos Table shown on the back cover, may be used to create cafeteria settings.

Frames for the tables and chairs are offered in chrome or five powdercoate finishes...includes the new Matte White.
