Aero

One of the most iconic Davis offerings, Aero is a marvel of design and engineering. Constructed of three continuous extruded aluminum pieces, this streamlined bench seats up to seven on two slender stainless steel legs.

Aero's structural integrity comes from the webbed internal structure of the extrusions, which provides strength and rigidity. Each piece—the back, corner, and seat—interlocks to the next, forming one stable unit.

The all-aluminum option works as beautifully indoors as outdoors, dotting corporate and university campuses, alike. The ribbed surface texture provides traction and durability, while creating nearly imperceptible connection details. A natural color anodized finish helps harden and protect the aluminum and makes it easy to clean.

Upholstery options add color, texture, and comfort to the sleek design of the shell. When upholstered, Aero brings understated style and ample seating to lounge and hospitality areas. Its natural durability, especially when paired with a durable textile, lends a modern aesthetic to restaurants and cafes, airports, train stations, and any other environment where clean lines and comfortable seating are desired.

Three arm styles—wood, polyurethane, and fully upholstered—each with their own benefits, may be added to the ends or intermittently to create individual seating space. Solid maple wood arms, available in standard finishes, add a touch of warmth. Black polyurethane arms stand up well in high traffic areas. Fully upholstered arms blend with matching textiles or leathers for a unified color scheme.

Backless benches in three- or four-seat units are available in all-aluminum or with upholstered seat inlays. Linking devices for both the backless and standard benches allow you to achieve visual symmetry, while adding stability to opposing pieces.
