Stir Up Collaboration

Expand Your Horizons

A private desk and task chair will always be a trustworthy base camp for focused productivity. But office culture has evolved to include more connection, more amenities, and more personal support. Astir—a soft modular seating collection designed to foster comfortable collaboration—celebrates a new approach to workplace engagement.

Go Beyond the Conference Room

Meetings aren't limited to confined rooms anymore. Astir lets ideas—and opportunities—take flight. Whether you're working alone or the whole team is invited, Astir is an ideal alternative to the status quo. With optional power modules for instant connectivity, contemporary multi-fabric and finish choices, and a variety of configuration options, this thoughtful collection is a breath of fresh air.

A Clever Approach to Casual Comfort & Style

Right at home in common areas, cafés, and touchdown spaces, Astir offers one-, two-, and three-seat lounges in low- or high-back selections, plus an optional high-back privacy screen for instant discretion. Need a few extra seats? Astir's got you covered with convenient bench, pouf, and ottoman additions. It's never been easier—or more stylish—to generate ideas in unconventional spaces.

Tim Buchenberger

Rick Joutras

In collaboration with HON, the QDesign team of Tim Buchenberger and Rick Joutras wanted to design around an optimal work posture.

"Astir seating is meant to encourage a comfortable upright posture while understanding the relationship between the seat and the worksurface," said Joutras. "Along with the correct posture, we also wanted to be sure that the collection was modular and could be easily grouped together."
